Super Duck Duck In The Super Duck was a comic book character created in 1943 for what was then MLJ Comics by staff artist Al Fagaly. As his name implies, Super Duck was originally a parody of Superman, even down to a red and blue costume. But his time as a superhero was short, and by late 1944 his stories became more conventional, in the Disney/Carl Barks mode. Super Duck Comics ran from 1944–1960, featuring "Super Duck, the Cockeyed Wonder" in his most familiar attire: a black shirt, red lederhosen and often an ...

Super Duck, a now-public-domain non-Disney character tranparently based on Donald Duck, appeared in the crossover comic Howard the Duck and Donald Duck in November of 2014. Super Duck was originally created as a superhero - hence his name - who'd take pills to gain great strenght. However, his comic quickly lost this focus and became very similar to Carl Barks' duck comics.

Daffy Duck is cast as Stuper Duck and his alter ego, Cluck Trent. After the introduction—which shows Daffy being faster than a speeding (pop gun) bullet, more powerful than (a barely-functional, 1800s-style) locomotive and (almost) able to leap tall buildings (the depicted tall building being " McKimson Associates," [sic]) in a single bound — the film proceeds to the story proper.

He calls down a bolt of lightning that transforms him from an angel into a duck. A super duck, yes, but you'd think he'd do a better job of rescuing his beloved if he had opposable thumbs. The only reason I can think of for this transformation is that a duck, being an animal, is incapable of sin and can therefore enter Hell without being condemned to eternal suffering.
